Halloween History
A Celtic Tradition Goes Global!

BET YOU DIDN'T KNOW

Halloween may seem like a mid-Autumn holiday but at one time it was actually a New Year's Eve party! The holiday has its roots in an ancient pre-Christian festival held on the last day of the Celtic year--October 31. The festival was known as Samhain and marked the end of the harvest season and the coming of winter. During the festival, bonfires were lit on hilltops so people could use them to get their hearth fires burning as colder days set in. As they went from bonfire to home, some people disguised themselves in masks to avoid detection by the evil spirits who, according to belief, were allowed to wander the earth freely on this night. To appease these troublemaking spirits, people left offerings of food and drink outside their homes. From this, we get our traditions of donning costumes and going trick or treating from house to house.

In the 7th century, Pope Boniface IV moved All Saints Day from May 13 to November 1. The night before the religious holiday became a holy night--or hallowed eve--thus giving us the name "Halloween."
